Aurora Borealis Plays Tucson

The northern sky above the Catalina Mountains was alive with dancing lights last night when a small group of Marana residents witnessed an unusual phenomenon. The show lasted about an hour and a half, beginning at 9:30 p.m. and ending at 11:00 p.m.

Aurora Borealis Glows Here

The natural display of the Aurora Borealis was a stunning sight. The colors of the sky ranged from bright oranges and yellows to deep purples and blues. The lights moved in a variety of patterns, creating a mesmerizing display for those lucky enough to witness it.

Dulles Won't Commit U.S. On Tunisia

Washington — Secretary of State Dulles today appeared in Paris and Tunisia to set their differences and center their traditionally close alliance relations. In response to reports that the U.S. might pull out of Tunisia, Dulles said that the situation is positive and that discussions are ongoing.

Dulles also said that a foreign ministers conference is being held to discuss the situation. The conference is scheduled to take place in Tunis on March 1st. Dulles emphasized the importance of maintaining the ties between the U.S. and Tunisia, stating that the relationship is vital to the stability of the region.

The Newsroom